It would require a much higher degree of skill to paint two such men as Mr. Canning and Sir Thomas Lawrence, so that nobody who had ever seen them could for a moment hesitate to assign each picture to its original. Here the mere caricaturist would be at fault. He would find in neither face any thing on which he could lay hold for the purpose of making a distinction; for the difference lay in delicate lineaments and shades, reserved for pencils of a rarer order. There is hardly one of Shakespeare s characters which deviates widely from the common standard, and which we should call eccentric if we met it in real life. The silly notion that every man has one ruling passion, and that this clue, once...
