

Seedlings of Barro Colorado Island and the Neotropics (Hardback)

By Nancy C. Garwood

Cornell University Press, United States, 2009. Hardback. Book Condition: New. Margaret Tebbs (illustrator). 279 x 221 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Published in Association with the Natural History Museum, London Few field guides exist to the plants of the American tropics. Guides to the juvenile stages of plants are rare for any part of the world. A guide to identification of tropical seedlings, from trees to herbs, is something to be treasured. Nancy Garwood s lifelong devotion to the study of the ecology and taxonomy of seedlings, combined with Margaret Tebbs s superb illustrations, has given us this first comprehensive guide to juvenile plants in the American tropics. from the Foreword by Robin B. Foster Seedlings are the future of forest communities. Knowledge of seedling ecology is essential for understanding the local abundance, distribution, and dynamics of individual species and plant populations, for deciphering the mechanisms responsible for the high species diversity in tropical forests, and for developing sound management and conservation plans for tropical forests. In this monumental work of botany, Nancy C. Garwood provides the first comprehensive guide to seedlings in the American tropics, using Barro Colorado Island in Panama as an emblematic locale. More than two decades...
