Excerpt: . wholly wanting in christian piety, or is without christian virtue. Neither of these things is either affirmed or implied in any passage of mine; hut the terms used by me, and the entire connexion, are particularly and pointedly guarded against such a construction. Had not you said it, I should certainly have thought that the person who could say, that.the interpretation which you have given is the natural meaning of my words, that in giving such an interpretation no Violence is put upon my language, and that no other sense offers itself to an unprejudiced mind, really had not ability to decide on the obvious import of a letter written in our native tongue, and ought to be sent to school, to learn the very rudiments of grammar and logick. This remark I apply to all the passages which you have cited. Taken...
